Chapter 1 by Neolillz

A boy walked through the large iron gates of the school yard. He paused to look around the school. It was prestigious and every aspect of the school was perfect. The hedges were trimmed intricately and the grass was cut to precisely 1 inch long. The boy walked into the school and paused when he reached the courtyard fountain. He took a seat and looked at the map.

"So, my dorm is... Scarlet Fox. That should be... in the east side." The boy said. "And my dorm leader is... Karmen Redman..." The boy stood and made his way down the east path of the school. He sighed turned a hairpin corner. As he did he ran right into someone.

The boy fell over dropping his notes, map and books. He sat up and rubbed his knees which were beginning to bleed. He looked up at the person he'd run into. It was another boy. His hair was vibrant red and his eyes matched. His had was raised in authority and fire blazed on the tips of his fingers.

"M-Mister Redman! I-I'm so sorry!" The boy cried. The fire on Karmen's fingers went out. The boy sighed. Karmen Redman one of the most powerful fire benders in the land. He was a senior at Element Academy and the head of the fire element dormitory.

"It's okay. You must be the new fire element student, right?" Karmen smiled softly and Sophist... "Welcome to the Scarlet Fox dormitory, how... thing just ask me!"

As Karmen Redman walked away Sophester got to his feet, collected up his notes and books. He continued walking to his dorm house when he passed the Silver Bird dorm. 'Air' He thought. 'The 4 dorms... Silver Bird, Air... Scarlet Fox, Fire... River Hounds, Water... and Emerald Cats, Earth... they are each designed to teach the elementanians how to use their magic but... the recent missing students are making me worry about my safety...' Eventually Sophester decided to keep the worrying to a minimal and just perform well in his classes.

As the days passed more and more people were going missing. The more people went missing the more suspicious each of the dorm leaders, including Karmen Redman, became. And the more suspicious the caring Mister Redman became the more and more worried Sophester became for his safety. Sophester, with a little bit of research, figured out that all of the missing students were all from the Scarlet Fox dorm...

Chapter 2 by Draeve

*What is happening at the Element Academy? More specifically, the Scarlet Fax dorm...*

After researching the missing students, ignoring the missing students and growing suspicion of the dorm leaders, things were rather normal. The (remaining) students went to class from 8:30 to 5:30, learning the theory and history of their respective elements.

The professors knew that there were students disappearing, and were trying their best to get to the bottom of it. Apparently, it has been going on for a bit over a month, so the principals and professors were getting frantic in their search.

The authorities that knew about the disappearances have given the staff two months to find the students, but if they didn't by the deadline, then they'll be taking things into their own hands.

There's around 300 students living here, divide it by the dorms, so that's about 75 students per dorm... A month or so, so only 45 students left. Sophester thought as he was hurrying to his third class. Despite his dislike for the history of the Air Elements, it was important to keep his 95% average.

Five yes, Sophester knew that he was a bit of a geek. But that wasn't all he had since blending into the background was what got him...

In the rumor mill, Mister Redman was the leader of the Scarlet Fox dorm and all. But Mister Redman seemed to ignore all the gossip and continue on with his life as if students under his care weren't going missing.

One particular night, which was tonight, to be specific, Sophester was going to spy on the secret meeting between the professors and dorm leaders, which he learned about while overhearing a whispered conversation between the history teacher and principal.

Despite only being there for a month, Sophester was confident in his knowledge of the school's corridors to not get lost, especially of the hiding places required in case anyone happened to be strolling through the hallways, which was prohibited unless you were part of the higher hierarchy of the school. Which were the dorm leaders and above.

That night, Sophester scaled and swung from the ceiling banisters to avoid going by ground. Every corridor or so, Earth elementarians set things to pop up at you when you stepped on a certain stone. Which in some cases, to the really dedicated, happened to be whole corridors.

Upon reaching the janitor's closet (which no one used), he eased the door open, luckily without any creaks, and glanced at the lit torch on the other side of him. Deciding to take some flame with him for light, Sophester concentrated. Before a small ball of flame separated itself from its larger body.

Recently in class, they have began learned about separating flames from their sources, but Sophester himself has only gotten to separating flames around the size of a baseball, which was sufficient light source for his little adventure.

Searching in every crack and cranny of the closet, Sophester finally found a small crack in the wall, which would normally be mistaken for the lack of care for the rooms, but this crack happened to have... an aura of magic that surrounded it.

Sending a small pulse of fire into the crack, the crack pulsed once more and stretched. Sophester gawked at the newly formed wall in front of him, replacing the old shelf of cleaning supplies in the span of a few seconds. Noticing the door beginning to shrink as quick as it had formed, he quickly opened, entered, and closed the door behind him.
